

EXOTERIK

ANNEKA LATTA (VOCALS & KEYBOARDS)
TOM FAY (GUITAR)
DARREN TOWNES (BASS)
STEVE RILEY (DRUMS)

The Anglo-Irish quartet who make up Exoterik are united by their determination and desire to create a heady mix of stomping, energetic riffage and ethereal beauty within their music.

Realising the recent changes that the power of the internet has brought to the music industry, Exoterik have retained all copyrights and ownerships of their material, ultimately making them a self-sufficient, self-promoting band on the cusp of this new digital age.

Emerging on the scene in late 2003 and with a line-up change in 2005, Exoterik toured venues up and down the UK, delivering their music and showcasing their high-powered performances, playing alongside the likes of Epica, Therapy?, Reuben, Breed 77, Die So Fluid and Lights.Action to name but a few, as well as performing at countless major festivals around the UK.

The band travelled to Finland in late 2006 to record three tracks before venturing to Latvia in the summer of 2007 to record their debut album with the multi-platinum producer John Fryer (famous for producing the HIM album 'Razorblade Romance' in 2000 as well as producing and mixing for artists such as; Cradle of Filth, Cocteau Twins, Nine Inch Nails and Depeche Mode).

The first single 'Are You Alive' was released 28 April 2008 and was soon followed by a 10 day U.K. tour with US rockers Wednesday 13. Shortly after the tour, Exoterik welcomed new bass player Darren Townes to the band line-up and continued to expand their fan base by stretching out further down the south of England and securing a U.K. date with rap-metal band Stuck Mojo.

Late 2008 also saw the release of Exoterik's debut album 'Don't Swallow' which coincided with a U.K. date supporting Italian gothic metal band Lacuna Coil in Leeds.
